ST. LOUIS THE CENTER OF RAILROAD ACTIVITY

Many Thousand Miles of Extensions Now Under Way in This Territory.

Uncommon activity in raffroad construction prevails in the territory dominated by St. Louis, it is estimated that not less than 2,000 miles of new rallroad lines are under construction in Missourt, Arkansas, Indian Territory, Oklahoma and Texas, Contracts have been let for at least that many more miles, and projected extensions will add another 2000 miles.

St. Louis's dependence on Eastern capital has apparently become a thing of the pust. No feasible proposition seems too hig for St. Louis financiers to undertain. The Manufacturers' Record, a Southern journal of commerce, in this week's issue says: "The Eastern financier is now put in the position perity.

It is reported that the Burlington is after coal roads in Hillinds, for the purpose of supplying coal to the Hill Northern roads, in additional to the immense supply now carried by that road. The Jacksonville and in additional to the immense supply now carried by that road. The Jacksonville and St. Louis is mentioned as a covered road, and one that will be taken into the Hill system. Its sale is becoming as often announced as that of the Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis.

The Frisco is in this position. If President Yoakum consents to a sale, it will be at a big figure; but, if he doesn't, the road will become a still larger system. In some quarters it is expected that he will return from Europe with a few new roads under his arms. The Santa Fe had this road, but it had to drop it when the crash of a few years ago came. The Santa Fe is a system of a great deal of independent importance, but there are those now who like to talk of things that might happen in an effort to put that system, along with the Frisco, where they would not be disturbing factors in the plans of other great builders of railroads systems in the West and Southwest. The men who deal in railroads when they are not playing golf or sailing yachts seem to have centered their attention about St. Louis, and almost anything is extended from the crash of May 11-10-18. An increase of $25.06. For the three weeks of May the earnings were $14.02.2.3. being an increase of $11.02.2.2.
